Contents

Acknowledgements 7

Foreword 9

Preface 11

CHAPTER 1 The colour of learning: Why student voice is essential to personalising learning 17
Changing colour through learning 18
The personalised learning agenda: Its genesis and relevance 20
Personalised learning or just plain learning? 22
Observing the chameleonic learner: Ways to explore learning through student voice 24
Linking theories of learning to "everyday" learning 25
Students' conceptions of learning 26
Assessment agendas 27
Students' conceptions of self-assessment 28
Assessment and learning in context 29
Making choices about learning 30

CHAPTER 2 Changing the way we see student learning 33
Teacher as researcher 33
The study in brief 35
Discussing learning with students 36
What do you mean? 38
Listening for the metaphors 41
Observing in the classroom 41
Observing outside the classroom 43
Bringing to the fore what is to be analysed 44
Summary 45

CHAPTER 3 Learning: It's what we do 47
Theoretical understandings of learning 48
Classical theory 48
Behavioural theories 49
Cognitive theories 50
Sociocultural theory 51
Approaches to learning 54
Phenomenography 54
Learning and context 57
School learning 59
The role of peers in the learning process 60
Out-of-school learning 61
Summary 63

CHAPTER 4 Students and their learning 65
Studying students' conceptions of learning 66
Students' conceptions of learning 66
Acquiring knowledge (A): What do I need to know? 69
Memorising and reproducing (B): What do I need to remember? 71
Using your knowledge (C): How do I do this? 75
Understanding (D): How do I use this information? 80
Different ways of knowing (E): How can I solve this problem? 85
Summary 87

CHAPTER 5 Assessment and self-assessment 91
Assessment: Roles, functions, influence 92
Assessment: The political context 96
Assessment as a dividing practice 98
Self-assessment and lifelong learning: Sustainable assessment 101
Incorporating self-assessment in teaching and learning 104
Summary 106

CHAPTER 6 How do students know when they have learnt? 109
Studying students' conceptions of self-assessment 111
Seeking an opinion (A): Have I learnt? 114
Getting marks and grades (B): How much have I learnt? 117
Performing (C): What did I learn? 121
Using criteria (D): Do I understand what I have learnt? 127
Setting learning goals (E): What do I want to learn? 131
Evaluating learning content (F): Is this worth learning? 135
Self-assessment: The dilemma for teachers 137
Summary 139

CHAPTER 7 The learner and context: Enjoying the edge of incompetence 141
Recognising different understandings of learning 143
Keeping an eye on context 144
Context and student role 145
The goal setter 146
The self-assessor 148
The peer teacher 153
The peer assessor 155
The collaborator 159
The adventurer 160
Self-assessment: Awareness of learning 162
The influence of context: The chameleonic effect 164

References 167